

“In a characteristically Japanese way, we have all but brought this epidemic under control in the last month and a half,” the prime minister declared. He lavished praise on the public but Mr Abe’s remarks begged a question: what is this Japan model and could it work anywhere else?